Defendants.

COMPLAINT

1. In the 231-year existence of the United States Congress, neither the House of Representatives nor the Senate has ever permitted a Member to vote by proxy from the floor of the chamber. Through the Civil War; through the burning of the Capitol during the War of 1812 and the terrorist attack on Washington on 9/11; and through the Yellow Fever Epidemic of 1793 and the Spanish Flu Pandemic of 1918, the Congress of the United States has never before flinched from its constitutional duty to assemble at the Nation's Capital and conduct the People's business in times of national peril and crisis. So it was for more than two centuries. Until now.

2. Defying this unbroken record of historical precedent and heedless of every relevant constitutional provision, a majority of the United States House of Representatives voted on May 15, 2020, to adopt House Resolution 965, 116th Congress ("H. Res. 965"), thereby authorizing its Members to vote by proxy. In an instant, and over the objections of 189 Members of the House from both political parties, the 231-year constitutional tradition of in-person assembly, deliberation, and voting among the People's representatives came to an end.

3. "[S]ometimes the most telling indication of [a] severe constitutional problem . . . is the lack of historical precedent for Congress's action." NFIB v. Sebelius, 567 U.S. 519, 549 (2012) (Opinion of Roberts, C.J.) (quotation marks omitted) (second alteration in original); see also NLRB v. Noel Canning, 573 U.S. 513, 522–26 (2014). This is one of those times. There is good reason that no Congress has ever done what the House has now purported to do in H. Res. 965: it is flatly prohibited by the Constitution.

4. It is simply impossible to read the Constitution and overlook its repeated and emphatic requirement that Members of Congress actually assemble in their respective chambers when they vote, whether on matters as weighty as declaring war or as ordinary as naming a bridge. See TODD

GARVEY, CONG. RES. SERV., LSB10447, CONSTITUTIONAL CONSIDERATIONS OF REMOTE VOTING IN CONGRESS 2 (Apr. 14, 2020) (“The text of the Constitution clearly envisions the House and Senate meeting and voting in person. As noted by the House Rules Committee, various provisions explicitly or implicitly contemplate the physical gathering of Congress.”). That requirement is no less mandatory in the midst of a pandemic, see INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 959 (1983), as the House’s forebears amply demonstrated when facing a far more deadly pandemic a little more than a century ago.

5. A majority of the House may have voted to ignore what the Constitution demands of it, but this Court may not do the same. Plaintiffs bring this action to preliminarily and permanently enjoin the use of proxy voting in the United States House of Representatives.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

6. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331 because the question whether H. Res. 965 violates the United States Constitution is a federal question.

7. This Court has authority to issue a declaratory judgment, grant injunctive relief, and order other relief that is just and proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1651, 2201, and 2202, and the United States Constitution.

8. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(2) because a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to this action occurred in this judicial district.

34. Defendant Nancy Pelosi is the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives and Member of the United States House of Representatives for the California 12th Congressional District. As Speaker of the House, she is authorized by H. Res. 965 to determine whether, after receiving notification from the Sergeant-at-Arms “that a public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus is in effect,” to designate a period “during which a Member who is designated by another Member as a proxy in accordance with section 2 may cast the vote of such other Member or record the presence of such other Member in the House.” H. Res. 965 § 1(a). She is also authorized to extend the period of proxy voting after receiving a further notification from the Sergeant-at-Arms. See id. § 1(b)(2). She is sued in her official capacity.

35. Defendant Cheryl L. Johnson is the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives. As the Clerk of the House, Ms. Johnson is generally responsible for “conduct[ing] a record vote or quorum call.” RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, ONE HUNDRED SIXTEENTH CONGRESS Rule XX(2)(a) (2019) (hereinafter “House Rule”). After a record vote or quorum call is conducted, “the Clerk shall enter on the Journal and publish in the Congressional Record, in alphabetical order in each category, the names of Members recorded as voting in the affirmative, the names of Members recorded as voting in the negative, and the names of Members answering present.” Id. Ms. Johnson has several responsibilities under H. Ms. Johnson is sued in her official capacity.

36. Defendant Paul L. Irving is the Sergeant-at-Arms of the United States House of Representatives. Under H. Res. 965, the Speaker of the House or her designee may authorize proxy voting for a 45-day period only after Mr. Irving, as the Sergeant-at-Arms, notifies the Speaker or her designee “that a public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus is in effect.” H. Res. 965 § 1(a). In addition, the Speaker or her designee is authorized to extend the proxy-voting period for an additional 45 days, but only “[i]f, during a covered period, the Speaker or the Speaker’s designee receives further notification from the Sergeant-at-Arms . . . that the public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus remains in effect.” Id. § 1(b)(2). Mr. Irving is sued in his official capacity.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

37. On January 9, 2019, the United States House of Representatives voted to adopt the Rules of the One Hundred Sixteenth Congress. See H. Res. 6, 116th Cong. (2019) (enacted).

38. Rule III(2) of the House Rules, first enacted in 1981, states:

- (a) A Member may not authorize any other person to cast the vote of such Member or record the presence of such Member in the House or the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.
- (b) No other person may cast a Member’s vote or record a Member’s presence in the House or the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

39. House Rule III(2) was not a historical aberration: “House rules have never authorized proxy voting on the floor” of the House. CHRISTOPHER M. DAVIS, CONG. RES. SERV., IN11372, THE PRIOR PRACTICE OF PROXY VOTING IN HOUSE COMMITTEE 1 (May 1, 2020) (emphasis added). Indeed, “proxy voting has never been permissible on the floor of either house.” Adrian Vermeule, The Constitutional Law of Congressional Procedure, 71 U. CHI. L. REV. 361, 407 (2004) (emphasis added).

40. At least as early as December 2019, “a novel (new) coronavirus known as SARS-CoV-2 . . . was first detected in Wuhan, Hubei Province, People’s Republic of China, causing outbreaks of the coronavirus disease COVID-19 that has now spread globally.” PRESIDENT

DONALD J. TRUMP, PROCLAMATION ON DECLARING A NATIONAL EMERGENCY CONCERNING THE NOVEL CORONAVIRUS DISEASE (COVID-19) OUTBREAK (Mar. 13, 2020), <https://bit.ly/2y6VrPt>.

41. In March 2020, Defendant Pelosi requested a report from James McGovern, the Chairman of the Committee on Rules, “concerning Member voting during the COVID-19 pandemic.” Hon. James P. McGovern, Dear Colleague: Report Examining Voting Options During the COVID-19 Pandemic, COMMITTEE ON RULES (Mar. 23, 2020), <https://bit.ly/2Z7NnJu>.

42. The subsequent report, compiled by the staff of the Democratic majority on the Rules Committee, observed that “[d]uring the 1918 Influenza Pandemic, the House did not adopt a method of remote voting—e.g. by telegraph or correspondence.” U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES COMMITTEE ON RULES, OFFICE OF THE MAJORITY, MAJORITY STAFF REPORT EXAMINING VOTING OPTIONS DURING THE COVID-19 PANDEMIC 2 (Mar. 23, 2020), <https://bit.ly/2Z57GY2>.

43. The report catalogued various options for continuing the business of the House notwithstanding the ongoing pandemic and opined that “[b]y far the best option is to use the existing House rules and current practices.” Id. For example, during the 1918 Spanish Flu Pandemic, the House “utilized a unanimous consent agreement to pass critical legislation despite not having a physical quorum present, recognizing the importance of conducting business in the chamber at a time of national crisis.” Id. These methods “are longstanding practices that have stood the test of time.” Id.

44. When unanimous consent or voice votes would not be possible, the report noted, the House could accommodate Members on recorded votes “by holding votes open longer than normal and having Members vote in shifts, sanitizing voting stations between uses, and controlling how many people are in the chamber and their proximity to each other.” Id. at 3.

45. The report then considered options that would involve changing the House Rules, noting that “[r]emote voting—in addition to facing logistical and security challenges—is untested constitutionally and there is no precedent for its use in Congress.” Id. at 4.

46. According to the report, proxy voting, whereby “an absent Member gives a present Member their proxy to cast an actual vote for them, for a prescribed period of time,” “could raise some of the same constitutional questions as remote voting—namely, whether a Member must be physically present in the chamber to vote.” Id. at 5. Indeed, Section 1 of H. Res. 965 describes proxy voting as “Remote Voting By Proxy.”

47. The report acknowledged that “proxy voting on the Floor would be unprecedented.” Id. at 5 n.4.

48. The House recessed on March 13, 2020 (with a brief return for purposes of voting on pandemic-related legislation later in March), so it did not immediately consider any resolutions relating to voting during the pandemic. The House returned from recess on May 15.

49. On May 13, Rules Committee Chairman McGovern introduced H. Res. 965.

50. Section 1(a) of H. Res. 965 authorizes, for the first time in American history, proxy voting on the floor of the House:

Notwithstanding rule III, at any time after the Speaker or the Speaker’s designee is notified by the Sergeant-at-Arms, in consultation with the Attending Physician, that a public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus is in effect, the Speaker or the Speaker’s designee, in consultation with the Minority Leader or the Minority Leader’s designee, may designate a period (hereafter in this resolution referred to as a “covered period”) during which a Member who is designated by another Member as a proxy in accordance with section 2 may cast the vote of such other Member or record the presence of such other Member in the House.

51. Section 1(b)(1) states that, “[e]xcept as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), a covered period shall terminate 45 days after the Speaker or the Speaker’s designee designates such period.”

52. Section 1(b)(2) gives the Speaker or her designee the option to extend the proxy-voting period:

If, during a covered period, the Speaker or the Speaker's designee receives further notification from the Sergeant-at-Arms, in consultation with the Attending Physician, that the public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus remains in effect, the Speaker or the Speaker's designee, in consultation with the Minority Leader or the Minority Leader's designee, may extend the covered period for an additional 45 days.

53. Section 1(b)(3) allows the Speaker or her designee to terminate the proxy-voting period early if the Sergeant-at-Arms notifies her that "the public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus is no longer in effect."

54. Section 2(a)(1) of H. Res. 965 describes the process by which a Member of the House may designate a proxy once the Speaker or her designee authorizes proxy voting: "In order for a Member to designate another Member as a proxy for purposes of section 1, the Member shall submit to the Clerk a signed letter (which may be in electronic form) specifying by name the Member who is designated for such purposes."

55. A Member may alter or revoke his or her proxy by submitting another signed letter to the Clerk. See H. Res. 965 § 2(a)(2)(A).

56. Under Section 2(a)(2)(B), "[i]f during a covered period, a Member who has designated another Member as a proxy under this section casts the Member's own vote or records the Member's own presence in the House, the Member shall be considered to have revoked the designation of any proxy under this subsection with respect to such covered period."

57. The Clerk "shall notify the Speaker, the [M]ajority [L]eader, the Minority Leader, and the other Member or Members involved of the designation, alteration, or revocation" "[u]pon receipt of a letter submitted by a Member pursuant to" Section 2. H. Res. 965 § 2(a)(3).

58. Section 2(a)(4) of H. Res. 965 sets a limit on the number of Members who may be represented by a single proxy: “A Member may not be designated as a proxy under this section for more than 10 Members concurrently.”

59. Under Section 2(b) of H. Res. 965, the Clerk is required to “maintain an updated list of the designations, alterations, and revocations submitted or in effect under subsection (a), and shall make such list publicly available in electronic form and available during any vote conducted pursuant to section 3.”

60. Section 3 of H. Res. 965, in turn, describes the process by which proxy votes will be recorded.

61. Section 3(a)(2) requires that a Member who is voting by proxy for another Member do so using ballot cards, “indicating on the ballot card ‘by proxy.’ ”

62. Section 3(b) relates to the quorum requirement. Under that provision, “[a]ny Member whose vote is cast or whose presence is recorded by a designated proxy under this resolution shall be counted for the purpose of establishing a quorum under the rules of the House.”

63. Finally, Section 3(c) relates to providing instructions to a proxy:

INSTRUCTIONS FROM MEMBER AUTHORIZING PROXY.—

(1) RECEIVING INSTRUCTIONS.—Prior to casting the vote or recording the presence of another Member as a designated proxy under this resolution, the Member shall obtain an exact instruction from the other Member with respect to such vote or quorum call, in accordance with the regulations referred to in section 6.

(2) ANNOUNCING INSTRUCTIONS.—Immediately prior to casting the vote or recording the presence of another Member as a designated proxy under this resolution, the Member shall seek recognition from the Chair to announce the intended vote or recorded presence pursuant to the exact instruction received from the other Member under paragraph (1).

(3) FOLLOWING INSTRUCTIONS.—A Member casting the vote or recording the presence of another Member as a designated proxy under this resolution shall cast such vote or record such presence pursuant to the exact instruction received from the other Member under paragraph (1).

64. Section 4 of H. Res. 965 relates to remote participation and voting in House committees and is not at issue in this lawsuit.

65. Similarly, Section 5 of H. Res. 965 relates to future remote voting via technology, such as the internet. This provision is also not at issue in this case.

66. On May 14, 2020, the Rules Committee reported H. Res. 965 to the full House.

67. On May 15, 2020, the House voted to adopt H. Res. 965 by a vote of 217 to 189. This unprecedented change in House rules occurred on a highly partisan basis, with no Member of the minority party voting in favor of the resolution and three Members of the majority party (plus one independent) voting against it.

68. Shortly thereafter, in accordance with Section 1(a) of H. Res. 965, Defendant Irving notified the Speaker “that a public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus is in effect,” H. Res. 965 § 1(a), and on May 20, 2020, the Speaker authorized proxy voting on the floor of the House for a period of 45 days, see Press Release, Dear Colleague to All Members Announcing Remote Voting ‘Covered Period’ Due to Coronavirus Public Health Emergency (May 20, 2020) <https://bit.ly/2ZuEmdQ>.

69. As of the date of this filing, 55 Members of Congress have sent letters to Defendant Johnson purporting to give their vote to another Member of Congress.

CONSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK

A. The Constitution's Text

71. Using unambiguous words like “meeting,” “assemble,” “attendance,” “present,” “absent,” “recess,” “sitting,” and “seat,” the Constitution clearly requires Members of Congress to be actually present in the House or Senate chamber to be counted as part of the quorum necessary for either House to do business and to cast their votes from the floor. Other words that appear throughout the Constitution, such as “adjourn” “preside,” and “quorum,” likewise bespeak, especially when viewed in context, the Framers’ understanding of the House of Representatives and the Senate as deliberative bodies, where the People’s representatives would gather together, face to face, to debate and address the issues of the day. Numerous provisions embody this understanding.

72. Article I, Section 2, Clause 3 states: “Enumeration shall be made within three Years after the first Meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent Term of ten Years, in such Manner as they shall by Law direct.” (emphasis added). As Samuel Johnson’s seminal dictionary stated, “To Meet” means “[t]o encounter; to close face to face.” 2 SAMUEL JOHNSON, A DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE (4th ed. 1773), <https://bit.ly/2zGh89J>. So, too, Noah Webster’s important dictionary defined “meet” as “[t]o come together, approaching in opposite or different directions; to come face to face; as, to meet a man in the road.” 2 NOAH

WEBSTER, AN AMERICAN DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE (1828), <https://bit.ly/364GREE>.

73. Article I, Section 3, Clause 2 states: “Immediately after they shall be assembled in Consequence of the first Election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three Classes.” (emphasis added). At the Founding, just as today, “To Assemble” meant “[t]o bring together into one place,” 1 SAMUEL JOHNSON, A DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE (4th ed. 1773) (emphasis added), <https://bit.ly/3dKdZnY>, and “Assembled” meant “[c]ollected into a body; congregated,” 1 NOAH WEBSTER, AN AMERICAN DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE (1828), <https://bit.ly/3cCDTd2>.

74. Article I, Section 3, Clause 6 states: “The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present.” (emphases added). “Present,” at the Founding, just as today, meant “[n]ot absent; face to face; being at hand,” 2 JOHNSON, supra (emphasis added); see also 2 WEBSTER, supra (“Being before the face or near; being in company.”)

75. Article I, Section 4, Clause 2 (later amended by the Twentieth Amendment) states: “The Congress shall assemble at least once in every Year, and such Meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by Law appoint a different day.” (emphases added).

76. Article I, Section 5, Clause 1 states: “Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business; but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.” (emphases added). As used in this context, “To Attend” is “[t]o be present with, upon a summons.” 1 JOHNSON, supra; see also 1 WEBSTER, supra (similar). And recall that to be “present” is to be “face to face.” See supra. There would have been no need for the Constitution to authorize Congress to compel its absent Members to meet face to face unless the “Majority” required for a “Quorum to do Business” meant that a majority of the Members of each house must be actually in the chamber.

77. Article I, Section 5, Clause 3 states: “Each House shall keep a Journal of its Proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such Parts as may in their Judgment require Secrecy; and the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.” (emphasis added).

78. Article I, Section 5, Clause 4 states: “Neither House, during the Session of Congress, shall, without the Consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other Place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.” (emphases added).

79. Article I, Section 6, Clause 1 states: “The Senators and Representatives . . . shall in all Cases, except Treason, Felony and Breach of the Peace, be privileged from Arrest during their Attendance at the Session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any Speech or Debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other Place.” (emphases added).

80. Article I, Section 7, Clause 2 states: “But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively.” (emphasis added).

81. Article I, Section 7, Clause 2 also states: “If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.” (emphasis added).

82. Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 states, in relevant part: “The Congress shall have Power . . . To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States . . .” (emphasis added).

83. Article II, Section 1, Clause 3 states: “The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the Certificates, and the Votes shall then be counted.” (emphasis added).

84. Article II, Section 1, Clause 3 also states: “and if there be more than one who have such Majority, and have an equal Number of Votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately chuse by Ballot one of them for President[.]” (emphasis added). A “Ballot,” at the Founding, was “[a] little bail or ticket used in giving votes, being put privately into a box or urn.”

1 JOHNSON, supra; see also 1 WEBSTER, supra.

85. Article II, Section 1, Clause 3 also states:

A quorum for this Purpose shall consist of a Member or Members from two thirds of the States, and a Majority of all the States shall be necessary to a Choice. In every Case, after the Choice of the President, the Person having the greatest Number of Votes of the Electors shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal Votes, the Senate shall chuse from them by Ballot the Vice President.

(emphases added).

86. Article II, Section 2, Clause 2 states, in relevant part: “[The President] shall have Power, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, to make Treaties, provided two thirds of the Senators present concur[.]” (emphasis added).

87. Article II, Section 2, Clause 3 states: “The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session.” (emphasis added). At the Founding, just as today, “recess” meant “[r]etirement; retreat; withdrawing; secession,” or “[d]eparture.” 2 JOHNSON, supra; see also 2 WEBSTER, supra (“[a] withdrawing or retiring; a moving back;” “[d]eparture”).

88. Article II, Section 3 states, in relevant part: “[The President] may, on extraordinary Occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in Case of Disagreement between them, with Respect to the Time of Adjournment, he may adjourn them to such Time as he shall think proper[.]” (emphases added). At the Founding, just as today, “to convene” was synonymous with “to assemble,” see 1 JOHNSON, supra; see also 1 WEBSTER, supra, which, as noted above, meant “[t]o bring together in one place,” 1 JOHNSON, supra (emphasis added).

89. The Twelfth Amendment, ratified in 1804, states: “

The Electors . . . shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate; -- the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted[.]

(emphases added).

90. The Twelfth Amendment also states:

The person having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice.

(emphases added).

91. The Twelfth Amendment also states:

The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President, shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice.

(emphasis added).

92. The Twentieth Amendment, Section 2, ratified in 1933, states: “The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall begin at noon on the 3d day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.” (emphases added).

93. The Twenty-Third Amendment, ratified in 1961, states: “The District constituting the seat of Government of the United States shall appoint in such manner as the Congress may direct” (emphasis added).

94. The Twenty-Fifth Amendment, Section 4, Clause 2, ratified in 1967, states:

Thereupon Congress shall decide the issue, assembling within forty-eight hours for that purpose if not in session. If the Congress, within twenty-one days after receipt of the latter written declaration, or, if Congress is not in session, within twenty-one days after Congress is required to assemble, determines by two-thirds vote of both Houses that the President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the Vice President shall continue to discharge the same as Acting President; otherwise, the President shall resume the powers and duties of his office.

(emphases added).

95. All of these provisions clearly contemplate the actual gathering together of representatives as a deliberative body. Thus, as the Supreme Court has held, to constitute a “Quorum” necessary to “do Business,” the Constitution requires “the presence of a majority, and when that majority are present the power of the house arises.” United States v. Ballin, 144 U.S. 1, 6 (1892) (emphases added).

96. The Constitution does not, however, dictate the method by which the presence of a quorum shall be proven. For that reason, it has long been the “universal practice” and “customary law of [legislative] bodies” that “the presence of a quorum having been ascertained and recorded at the beginning of a session, that record stands unless and until the point of no quorum is raised.” Christoffel v. United States, 338 U.S. 84, 92 (1949) (Jackson, J., dissenting); see also id. at 87 n.3 (majority opinion). This is why legislative business may proceed by unanimous consent without a quorum call.

97. As noted above, because the House has not yet adopted and implemented an internet-based remote-voting system, such a system is not at issue in this case.

98. And while the Constitution also empowers each House to “determine the Rules of its Proceedings,” it has always been clear that a House of Congress “may not by its rules ignore constitutional restraints or violate fundamental rights.” Id. at 5. No one would deny, to take an extreme example, that it would be unconstitutional for the House to establish a rule permitting only male Members to vote.

99. By contrast, the Constitution nowhere mentions congressional committees or imposes any quorum or voting requirements on them. This is why, for example, territorial delegates have been permitted to vote in congressional committees since the First Congress. See Michel v. Anderson, 14 F.3d 623, 630–32 (D.C. Cir. 1994).

100. Nor does the Constitution anywhere require that the President or Members of the Judiciary exercise their authority in a particular place. There is therefore no reason to doubt the constitutionality of remote voting by Members of the Supreme Court, for instance, or to question the common practice (even before the COVID-19 pandemic) of federal judges convening telephonic hearings.

101. But in light of the foregoing provisions, there can be no serious dispute that the Constitution does require Members of Congress—Senators and Representatives—to assemble in person if they are to be counted as present toward the Quorum Requirement contained in Article I, Section 5 or if they are to cast a vote from the floor of either House.

B. The Constitutional History

102. The COVID-19 pandemic is not the first deadly epidemic to confront Congress. Indeed, less than two years after ratification of the Bill of Rights, the Third Congress was faced with the Yellow Fever Epidemic that wiped out nearly ten percent of the population of the City of Philadelphia, which was then the seat of the Federal Government.

103. The epidemic appeared in August of 1793, and by year’s end, roughly 5,000 people had died out of a total population of only 55,000. See J.M. POWELL, BRING OUT YOUR DEAD: THE GREAT PLAGUE OF YELLOW FEVER IN PHILADELPHIA IN 1793 vi, 242–47, 282 (1949).

104. In response to the crisis, some Members advocated relocating Congress, but it was acknowledged that “Congress would have to meet within the legal limits of Philadelphia if only in some open field for just long enough to select another place.” JAMES THOMAS FLEXNER, GEORGE WASHINGTON: ANGUISH AND FAREWELL (1793-1799) 97 (1972). And, of course, the notion of relocating Congress presupposed that Congress would, in fact, have to meet in person.

105. In the end, however, the House convened in Philadelphia on December 2, “being the day appointed for the annual meeting of Congress,” “[a]nd, a quorum, consisting of a majority of the whole number, being present,” proceeded to conduct the business of government, remaining in session, and in the city, through June 9 of the following year. See House Journal 1793 at 3-4.

106. In the immediate aftermath of the Yellow Fever Epidemic the Third Congress—clearly aware of the constitutional requirement that it convene in person to conduct the People’s business—enacted a law calling not for proxy voting, but for the relocation of Congress if a deadly epidemic should again ravage the seat of government:

Whenever Congress is about to convene, and from the prevalence of contagious sickness, or the existence of other circumstances, it would, in the opinion of the President, be hazardous to the lives or health of the members to meet at the seat of Government, the President is authorized, by proclamation, to convene Congress at such other place as he may judge proper.

2 U.S.C. § 27; see also Acts of the Third Congress of the United States, Sess. I, Ch. 17 (April 3, 1794). This Founding-Era action of Congress provides compelling—if not decisive—confirmation of what the constitutional text clearly requires: Congress must conduct its business in person.

107. Nor has contagious disease been the only threat that Congress has faced when assembling in person. War, too, has come to the footsteps of the Capitol. On September 19, 1814, less than one month after British troops had reduced all but one of the capital city’s major public buildings to rubble, the Thirteenth Congress convened in special session at Blodgett’s “Great Hotel.” Harold H. Burton and Thomas E. Waggaman, The Story of the Place: Where First and A Streets Formerly Met at What Is Now the Site of the Supreme Court Building, 51/52 RECORDS OF THE COLUMBIA HISTORICAL SOCIETY 138, 141–42 (1951/1952). Two days later, the House of Representatives rejected a proposal to remove the seat of government from the District by a vote of 83 to 54. Id. at 142. The House remained in temporary quarters throughout the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Congresses. Id. But the Members continued to assemble and to meet in person, even though the capital city lay in ruins.

108. The same was true during the Civil War, when the seat of government itself was often at risk from attack by Confederate forces. Despite that risk, on April 15, 1861, just three days after the first shots were fired at Fort Sumter, Abraham Lincoln exercised his constitutional authority to summon the “Senators and Representatives . . . to assemble at their respective Chambers, at 12 O'Clock, noon on Thursday, the fourth day of July next, then and there to consider and determine such measures as, in their wisdom, the public safety and interest may seem to demand." ABRAHAM LINCOLN, PROCLAMATION (Apr. 15, 1861), <https://bit.ly/3ecYGUV>.

109. And the Members assembled in the Capitol, even though they arrived to find hundreds of soldiers quartered there in the Spring of 1861. They met, even after beds had been set up in the Rotunda, in Statuary Hall, and in the corridors of the Capitol to treat wounded Union soldiers from First Bull Run. They met, even as Union soldiers stood sentry at every door. And they continued to meet throughout the war, even as 655,000 Americans lost their lives on battlefields surrounding the seat of government, in Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. The war that cleaved the Union did not prevent the Members of Congress from assembling at the seat of government.

110. Contagion came to the Capitol again early in the next century, as the 1918 Spanish Flu Pandemic spread throughout the world, killing over 50 million people. The death toll in the United States reached 675,000 people, at a time when the country's population barely exceeded 100 million. On October 7, 1918, acknowledging that "an epidemic of alarming proportions is prevailing throughout the country," Representative Henry Rainey asked and obtained unanimous consent "to close the galleries of this House until further action shall be taken by the House." 56 Cong. Rec. 11164 (Oct. 7, 1918). On October 11, Congressman Foster reported that there had been 72 deaths and 1,700 new cases in Washington in the last 24 hours, and that "we probably have not reached the crest of the epidemic." 56 Cong. Rec. 11200 (Oct. 11, 1918). Five days later, on October 16, the full force of the flu hit the House as Representative Jacob Meeker succumbed to the virus. 56 Cong. Rec. 11321 (Oct. 17, 1918).

111. That same month, the Members entered into a “gentlemen’s agreement” in light of the upcoming election in November whereby they would continue to do House business through unanimous consent. 56 Cong. Rec. 11480 (Oct. 26, 1918). And they had already resolved to reassemble when the new Congress convened on the first Monday of December. 56 Cong. Rec. 11380 (Oct. 19, 1918) (inquiring whether a bill would “have the same status when we convene here in December, with a quorum, as it has now?” (emphasis added)).

112. The House continued to meet in Washington during the Sixty-Fifth Congress, as more Members fell ill with Spanish Flu, some fatally. See 57 Cong. Rec. 3533 (Feb. 16, 1919); WILLIAM P. BORLAND, MEMORIAL ADDRESSES 11 (Mar. 2, 1919), <https://bit.ly/2Xrwh6G>; see also History, Sick Days, WHEREAS: STORIES FROM THE PEOPLE’S HOUSE (Dec. 17, 2018), <https://bit.ly/2A0iP1U>. Thus, even in the depth of a pandemic that was orders of magnitude worse than today’s COVID-19 crisis, the Members continued to meet and to conduct the business of the House.

113. Finally, of course, there was that day in September 2001, when terrorists bent on decapitating the American Government crashed a passenger aircraft into the Pentagon, only minutes before the South Tower of the World Trade Center collapsed from an earlier attack. Shortly thereafter, heroic passengers aboard United 93 crashed a plane inbound for the capital into a field in Pennsylvania, sparing Washington another direct hit on the American Government. The North Tower of the World Trade Center would collapse minutes later, and by the time the smoke cleared from that horrible day, nearly 3,000 people lay dead. Yet Congress assembled, refusing to bow to the threat of another terrorist attack and determined to strike back against America’s enemies. In the years following the 9/11 tragedy, Congress considered many scenarios to address the continuity of Congress, notably with the expedited election to the House of Members in extraordinary circumstances. It did not, however, seriously consider or adopt proxy voting. See, e.g., R. ERIC PETERSEN AND SULA P. RICHARDSON, CONG. RES. SERV., RL32958, CONTINUITY OF CONGRESS: ENACTED AND PROPOSED FEDERAL STATUTES FOR EXPEDITED ELECTION TO THE HOUSE IN EXTRAORDINARY CIRCUMSTANCES (Aug. 9, 2005), <https://bit.ly/2ZyToyU>.

114. In sum, over the course of 231 years, Congress has assembled at the seat of government while war raged in the surrounding environs and deadly contagion spread throughout the country. Yet neither House of Congress has ever authorized voting from the floor by mail, telegraph, or proxy, nor even considered, it appears, such a procedure. The unbroken American tradition of in-person assembly and voting in Congress confirms the unambiguous text of the Constitution: proxy voting by Members of the House of Representatives is unconstitutional.

THE INJURY TO PLAINTIFFS

115. Because the Constitution requires a Member to be actually present to count toward the quorum requirement, it follows that proxies cannot be counted toward a quorum, yet H. Res. 965 allows a single physically present Member of the House to be counted up to 11 times toward a quorum.

116. In the same way, because the Constitution requires a Member of the House to be actually present to vote from the floor, it follows that proxy votes have no constitutional validity, yet H. Res. 965 allows a single physically present Member of the House to vote up to 11 times on legislation.

117. The inescapable mathematical result of H. Res 965 is the dilution of voting power of those Members who have not been given (or, like the Representative Plaintiffs, refuse to accept) proxies. See Michel, 14 F.3d at 625. Injury to Representative Plaintiffs by this dilution of their voting power based on the use of the proxy system established by H. Res. 965 is certain, imminent, and impending. Indeed, because 55 Members have already given their proxies to other Members, Representative Plaintiffs' voting power has already been diluted. For example, Leader McCarthy's vote currently counts for 1 vote, while Representative Raskin's vote currently counts for 7 votes.

118. By diluting the voting power of Representative Plaintiffs and other similarly situated Members of the House, H. Res. 965 also dilutes the voting power of individual voters in those Members' congressional districts. Id. at 626. When a Member of Congress present on the floor votes 11 times on a piece of legislation (once for the Member and 10 times by proxy for absent Members) and a Representative Plaintiff votes once on the same piece of legislation, the strength of a vote in the Representative Plaintiff's district is severely diluted. Injury to Constituent Plaintiffs by this dilution of their voting power based on the use of the proxy system established by H. Res. 965 is certain, imminent, and impending. Indeed, because 55 Members have already given their proxies to other Members, Constituent Plaintiffs' voting power has already been diluted.

119. Moreover, because any legislation enacted pursuant to H. Res. 965 would be subject to constitutional attack (if not be doomed to constitutional invalidity), both Representative Plaintiffs and Constituent Plaintiffs may be harmed by the uncertainty and potential invalidity of legislation enacted under H. Res. 965, and they have an interest in the speedy resolution of the constitutionality of H. Res. 965.

COUNT 1: VIOLATION OF THE QUORUM REQUIREMENT OF ARTICLE I, SECTION 5 OF THE U.S. CONSTITUTION

120. Plaintiffs re-allege and incorporate by reference the allegations of the preceding paragraphs.

121. Article I, Section 5, Clause 1 states: "Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business; but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.” (emphases added).

122. Article I, Section 5, Clause 1 requires that a majority of the Members of either House of Congress be actually present in order for there to be a “Quorum to do Business.” Absent a majority of actually present Members, the House is forbidden by the Constitution to vote on legislation or to conduct any other “Business.”

123. This reading of Article I, Section 5, Clause 1 is confirmed by numerous provisions throughout the Constitution, as discussed above in Paragraphs 71–101.

124. This reading of Article I, Section 5, Clause 1 is also confirmed by 231 years of consistent historical precedent, as discussed above in Paragraphs 102–114. Never before has either House of Congress purported to authorize a quorum by proxy and/or proxy voting by Members on legislation and similar matters, even in times of national crisis and grave danger to the safety of the assembled Members.

125. H. Res. 965 authorizes the House to satisfy the Quorum Requirement and to conduct business with less than a majority of Members actually present. Indeed, under H. Res. 965, only 20 Members of the House need be actually present to constitute a quorum.

126. By authorizing proxy voting and counting absent Members toward establishing a quorum, H. Res. 965 violates the Quorum Requirement of Article I, Section of the United States Constitution and is invalid.

COUNT II: VIOLATION OF THE YEAS AND NAYS REQUIREMENT
OF ARTICLE I, SECTION 5 OF THE U.S. CONSTITUTION

127. Plaintiffs re-allege and incorporate by reference the allegations of the preceding paragraphs.

128. Article I, Section 5, Clause 3 states: “Each House shall keep a Journal of its Proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such Parts as may in their Judgment require Secrecy; and the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.” (emphases added).

129. Article I, Section 5, Clause 3 requires that recorded votes of either House of Congress be cast by Members who are actually present in the chamber.

130. This reading of Article I, Section 5, Clause 3 is confirmed by numerous provisions throughout the Constitution, as discussed above in Paragraphs 71–101.

131. This reading of Article I, Section 5, Clause 3 is also confirmed by 231 years of consistent historical precedent, as discussed above in Paragraphs 102–114. Never before has either House of Congress purported to authorize a quorum by proxy and/or proxy voting by Members on legislation and similar matters, even in times of national crisis and grave danger to the safety of the assembled Members.

132. H. Res. 965 authorizes Members of the House to cast their votes in a recorded vote via proxy, without being actually present in the House chamber.

133. By authorizing proxy voting on legislation and similar matters, H. Res. 965 violates the Yeas and Nays Requirement of Article I, Section 5, Clause 3 of the United States Constitution and is invalid.

COUNT III: VIOLATION OF THE STRUCTURE OF THE U.S. CONSTITUTION

134. Plaintiffs re-allege and incorporate by reference the allegations of the preceding paragraphs.

135. The Constitution, in numerous provisions discussed above, makes clear that Members of Congress must be actually present to count toward the Quorum Requirement or to be able to cast their votes from the floor.

136. By authorizing proxy voting and counting absent Members toward establishing a quorum, H. Res. 965 contravenes the Founders' design, subverts the structure of the United States Constitution, and is invalid.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court enter an order and judgment:
